Why You Need to Wear a Postpartum Recovery Support Belt?

First Week After Birth

Use the Stomach Belt to support and align your abdomen to pre-pregnancy state. Helps to reduce swelling and prevent sagging.

KeaMommies Tips:

For Vaginal Birth, you may start using it 2-3 hours after birth. For C-Section Mommies, please wait till your stitches have fully healed or consult your doctor before using a belly band or postpartum belt.

1-6 Weeks After Birth

Use the Stomach Belt, followed by the Waist Belt. This will help in providing lumbar support to aid in breastfeeding, it will also help to relieve back pain.

Using two Belts to support helps to close in your abdominal muscles which can help in diastasis recti.

KeaMommies Tips:

Wear an undershirt before wearing your KeaBelly Postpartum Belt for more comfort and to prevent friction between the belt and skin. Avoid binding too tightly, to prevent discomfort in digestion. Just ensure that it is firmly secured around your body.

7-12 Weeks After Birth

Add on a pelvis belt after you have the other two belts on. This will help to stabilize loosened pelvic joints after they have been enlarged in preparation of labor. Return your hips to pre-pregnancy state in no time!

KeaMommies Tips:

Use the whole set of postpartum support belts for at least eight weeks after birth for the best results.

Drink plenty of liquid daily to reduce water retention and to help in increasing your breastmilk supply if you are breastfeeding. Get enough rest and sleep whenever possible as taking care of a newborn is never easy. Move around the house more often as part of staying active.
